Dear Sirs,

I have finished reading the staff of the California Energy Commission report "Assessment of Avian Mortality From Collisions and Electrocutions." I believe this to be important information to be available to, and included in, the process of determining sites and evaluating effectiveness of wind farm sites.

It is difficult to think that energy generation that seemed so innocuous when it was first envisioned would turn out to have such unintended consequences. Rather than try to rescue bird and bat populations after the damage has been done, we should be proactive in preventing their deaths.

Thank you for your time and attention in this matter.

Sincerely,

Sharyn E. Fuller
